The vision of the Center for Government Contracting is to establish the first-in-the-nation university center to address business, policy, regulatory and other issues in government contracting.

Activities to implement this vision will focus on three lines of effort: Research, Education & Training, and Collaboration.

The George Mason University School of Business is uniquely positioned to create this center by virtue of the composition of our faculty and students as well as our geographic co-location with the Federal Government and many headquarters and major facilities of companies that make up the $500 billion government contracting (GovCon) industry.
A nexus for government, industry, and academia to address business, policy, regulatory and other issues in government contracting
